Digital Curation

The Teacher Librarian as Digital Curator

Digital Curation is not just about collecting links. It needs to be about contextualising specific collections and providing added value.

Getting Started:

- Search a range of curation platforms for existing collections
- Identify 'good', 'expert' curators to follow
- Create links to existing collections of other curators that match your needs
- Add value – annotations and tagging are essential
- Make it part of your daily practice
- Share – Make your curations publicly available

Digital Curation Sources

Digital Curators often use the following to discover content:

- Twitter - <http://twitter.com>
- Facebook - <http://facebook.com>
- Feedly - <http://feedly.com>
- Flipboard - <https://flipboard.com>
- Stumble Upon - <https://www.stumbleupon.com>

Sharing Curation Efforts

Once curated you will want to share your efforts with the world on networking sites or use plug-ins and widgets to directly publish curated content onto a blog:

- Google+ - <https://plus.google.com>
- LinkedIn – <http://www.linkedin.com>
- WordPress – <http://wordpress.com>
- Tumblr – <https://tumblr.com>

Scoop It

The screenshot displays the Scoop It website interface. The browser's address bar shows the URL www.scoop.it/t/school-libraries-make-a-difference?page=3. The website's navigation bar includes links for School Libraries, Edit, Sharing, Customization, SEO / Site integration, Teams, Analytics, Newsletter, and Hide this topic. A sidebar on the right indicates 279 items and 100 suggested content items.

The main content area features three articles:

- What does a school library look like in the digital age?
From www.guardian.co.uk - July 9, 2013 10:08 AM
"As more of her students use ebooks and iPads to read, principal Tricia Kelleher reflects on the role of her school's library"
Sharon Hayes's insight: We are thinking about this very thing as we redesign the Fiction area of our library. The use of tablets, wireless internet connection and new pedagogies mean its important to have different spaces to work alone, in groups and to still be helped to access the right information be it digital or print.
- Best Websites for Teaching & Learning 2013 | American Association of School Librarians (AASL)
From www.ala.org - July 5, 2013 7:58 PM
The article includes the AASL logo and the text "BEST 2013 Website for Teaching & Learning".
- The New School Library
From www.nais.org - June 30, 2013 11:49 AM
"As libraries continue to change with the growth of technology tools,
